To serve as a Board of director on the International Council of Nurses (ICN)

My professional commitment and expertise in nursing governance and sociopolitical leadership

WHY I NEED YOUR SUPPORT

I have always recognised that nurses are a global economic and political force because they have the leadership to actively contribute to solving current and future challenges such as: resource scarcity, climate changes, mobility, and universal healthcare. In addition, nurses act based on evidence-based nursing practice and as influential, competent, humanistic, well-educated professionals.

I am also convinced that ICN and its members are constantly working to find opportunities for collaboration and innovation to bring about the necessary transformations and promote our nursing political voice in all countries. ICN is the most appropriate and unifying global nursing network to lead the necessary dialogue, decisions and actions with international bodies in a context of transformation at all levels. ICN and nurses make an essential and collective contribution to international issues such as universal healthcare coverage, mental health, non-communicable diseases, infectious diseases (epidemics), emergency preparedness (floods) in the context of climate changes and global conflicts.

I unreservedly support the ICN, which acts as a leader and advocate for universal access to healthcare, income and professional status, support networks and training. It represents the profession and defends healthy employment conditions, better working environments and the self-sufficiency of healthcare resources to ensure the economic and sustainable development of people's health. ICN members are at the heart of nursing political action to collectively optimise healthcare for all. In conclusion, the education training provided by the Global Nursing Leadership Institute enables its members to acquire all the skills needed in several spheres of nursing practice to promote equity, diversity and inclusion from a social justice perspective.

Thank you for supporting my candidacy for this position and I look forward to serving on the ICN.
